My whole life I've been aware of highly unusual and rare events or relationships.

In September 2026 I finally decided to try to document and list every one of them.

As the list grew, the small odds of most events and the cumulative probability of them all happening to the same person hit me. I chose to embrace it this September for the first time ever and gather the evidence. This is not about ranking people or claiming anyone is special. All people are equal. It's simply an attempt to understand just how improbable this collection of events is for one individual.

What do you think? Is this common to this level? What, if anything, should I do with this?

Thank you,

Air Crash Kills 3 Rock 'n' Roll Idols

CLEAR LAKE, Iowa, Feb. 3 (UPI)—Three of the Nation's top rock 'n' roll singing stars—Ritchie Valens, J. P. (The Big Bopper) Richardson and Buddy Holly—died today with their pilot in the crash of a chartered plane.

The singers, members of a rock 'n' roll troupe touring Midwest cities, died while trying to make a fast hop between dates so they could get their shirts laundered.

Following an appearance before 1000 fans at Clear Lake last night, they chartered a plane at the Mason City Airport, two miles east of here, and took off at 1:36 A. M. for Fargo, N. D.

Their Bonanza four seat single engine plane crashed minutes later in a snowy farm field five miles north of this northeast Iowa resort community.

It skidded across the snow for 558 feet. The body of Valens, a 17-year-old recording sensation hailed as "the next Elvis Presley," was thrown 40 feet.

in the world of rock 'n' roll music. They had shot to prominence in a matter of months and had wide and enthusiastic fellowings among teen-agers.

Valens, whose name is Richard Valenzuela, recently finished his first motion picture, "Go, Johnny! Go." His first recording six months ago, "Donna," sold more than a million copies.

Holly, star of the Crickets, hit the rock 'n roll pinnacle with his recordings of "Peggy Sue" and "That'll Be the Day." Both reportedly sold more than a million and a half copies.

Richardson, known professionally as the "Big Bopper," was on leave as a disc jockey, singer and program director at station KTRM in Beaumont. His "Chantilly Lace" was rated by Billboard for a time as the third most played record.

A year before the bin Laden raid he was stationed to the U.S. Naval War College but returned & took command of all Seal Team 6 three months after the raid.

My EPIC TRAINING w/ actual future SEAL Team 6 Commander:

Wyman & I rode our bikes in the side door of the base hotel then up an elevator & rode on the upper floors. There were & are two elevators. We would stop one elevator at a higher floor then as people exited lower floors we would be shooting our squirt guns down through the inner part of the elevator shaft through the crack as door meets floor. People exiting would be hit by water through that small gap.

Chuck Colson was known as Richard Nixon's hatchet man — the man who said he would walk over his own grandmother to re-elect the president. He was convicted in the Watergate scandal and sent to federal prison. He emerged a Christian and founded Prison Fellowship — now operating in over 100 countries, the largest prison ministry on earth. The man whose political career was built on ruthlessness spent the rest of his life giving dignity back to people the system had thrown away.

Dear Gail:

I can't tell you how much I appreciated your letter of December 19. I remember well the experience in 1960 that you refer to. I also remember myself as a very hard driving ex-Marine officer who wanted so desperately to get a job done, but success seemed to be the only goal.

You are quite right that I have matured over the years. There is a chapter in C.S. Lewis' book Mere Christianity dealing with the human ego that struck me very hard this past Summer. I suppose because Lewis was so accurately describing me when he talked about the ego of those who achieve success being perhaps the greatest sin in a Christian life. I never like to look back, but I suppose if I had slowed down before to really take stock of myself, that I might have found that all of my values were not quite what I would like them now to be.

It has really given me a great thrill to hear from people like yourself whom I have known in various ways over the years. The point of your letter is well taken. I really appreciated your thoughtfulness in writing it. I will give Patty your best and I do appreciate your good wishes. I do hope that all is well with you. I hope if you are ever in this area that you will be sure to give us a call.

Best regards.

Sincerely,

ing of a Saltonstall, the shrewd campaign manager sees that his man travels the high road and doesn't know what his manager is doing down on the plains of battle. After several bogus mailings, plus inciting a taxpayers' revolt in O'Connor's hometown, we pulled neck and neck.

A late September poll showed that we were gaining among the Irish bloc whose votes held the key to the election. That information dictated a special tactic. I secretly rented a few rooms in a third-rate Boston hotel, installed new locks on the doors, and packed it with young campaign volunteers who began addressing plain envelopes to every Irish-sounding name in the phone book, some three hundred thousand families. Then we inveigled six prominent Irish Democrats to sign a letter endorsing Kennedy (running against Nixon) for President and Saltonstall for the Senate. The two senators, though in opposing parties, had worked together for so many home-state projects that the Saltonstall-Kennedy hyphenation was synonymous with every federal goodie that had come to Massachusetts. The letter was a blatantly provincial appeal to help Saltonstall ride in on the Kennedy vote. Saltonstall knew nothing of the ploy. In his speeches, of course, he continued to back Nixon.

The Friday night before the election I visited the hideaway hotel rooms. Twenty nearly exhausted volunteers were hand stuffing the mountain of envelopes. At midnight we'd scheduled two station wagons to arrive at the back-alley entrance; the kids would load box after box into the wagons and then drive them to an out-of-the-way post office where a friendly postmaster would process them for us.

There was only one hitch. A Harvard freshman named Tom, in charge of the secret project, asked to see me alone. We stepped out of the room and walked together down the dimly lit corridor. "Chuck," he said, "I'm worried about one of our girls. Her father is an avid party man and she thinks we're being disloyal to Nixon. I overheard her talking about going to Republican headquarters to tell the chairman what's going on here."

"Oh, no," I moaned. "That'll blow us right out of the water. Any publicity and this will boomerang. Nixon hasn't a chance in this state and I've told his people what we're doing. We're trying to save a Republican senator, that's all."

I stood with my head down staring at the grease-stained carpet, a sick feeling in my stomach. We couldn't let anyone know that Saltonstall's committee was behind the mailing. It had to look independent, a genuine letter from Kennedy supporters. The election could be riding on this one last-minute appeal which our opponent would never have time to rebut.

"Tell you what, Tom," I looked up into his tired eyes. "Take this." I handed him ten crisp ten-dollar bills, all I had in my wallet. "Take this girl out tonight and get her loaded. Keep her diverted, whatever you have to do until Election Day."

Tom, a ladies' man, happily followed orders. The letters arrived in three hundred thousand Irish homes across the state the next Monday morning. Saltonstall, securely attached to Kennedy's coattail, was re-elected handily by that many votes.

Heady over my success in managing the Saltonstall campaign, I spurned the senator's urgings to remain his administrative assistant, a secure, well-paying job for the next six years. I turned down bids to join a number of Boston law firms. Rating the Dynamic Michael Vick site

Review When Michael Vick runs a quarterback draw, you don't see him for very long. Once he gets past the initial wave of defenders, usually the best view you get of Vick is the back of his uniform.

Emmett Prosser But Saturday the spotlight will be on Vick for a different reason. You won't see him at all.

Because of injuries, Vick won't play in his Virginia Tech's most important game of the season against Miami. He'll be on the sidelines, hoping his teammates can hold on to their No. 2 ranking.

But if you still yearn for a glimpse of Vick, log on to the Dynamic Michael Vick Web site. This page does a much better job profiling the Hokies' Heisman hopeful than the Virginia Tech Web site does.

The site does an outstanding job incorporating a wide range of audio and video clips on the site. It has video and audio highlights of each game Vick has played under center, including some outstanding audio clips from last season's national championship.

Looking for a Michael Vick highlight to download, the site has all of his memorable touchdown runs, including this year's amazing dance to the end zone at Boston College.

It's the best college football tribute site JS Online has ever seen. If any Heisman voters who are on the fence need cliff notes, this page could sway a few Drew Brees fans.

Three times I've been the personal Realtor for the inventor of the 1st working Quantum Computer.

Ai run by quantum computers. Your future (can't stop it)

Quantum computers will fundamentally reshape our future by solving complex problems that would take conventional supercomputers thousands of years to compute.

The undisputed "bible of quantum computing" is the textbook Quantum Computation and Quantum Information by Michael A. Nielsen and Isaac L. Chuang.

Yes, Isaac Chuang is widely credited as the co-inventor of the first working quantum computer

In 1998, while working with Neil Gershenfeld at MIT and Mark Kubinec at Stanford, Chuang built a 2-qubit system using nuclear magnetic resonance (NMR) technology. This machine manipulated the nuclear spins of atoms in a liquid solution using radio frequency pulses to execute the first-ever real-world demonstration of a quantum algorithm.

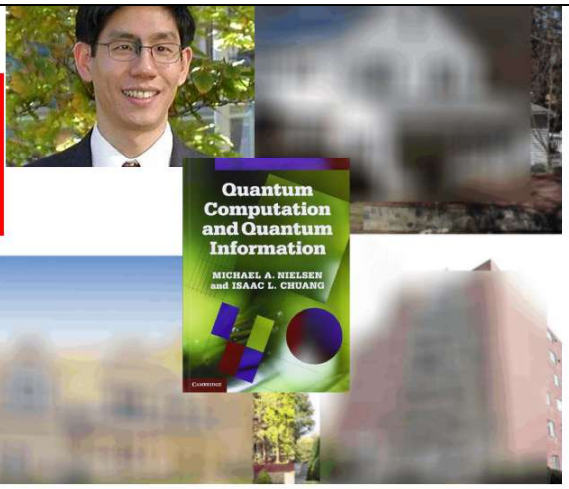

Yes, Isaac "Ike" Chuang led the team that created the world's first working primitive quantum computer.

Fortunate to have represented Ike in his last 3 real estate sales

The Steve Wozniak / Steve Jobs of Quantum Computing

(But certainy a higher IQ than those two)

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Isaac_Chuang

He is on the academic side at MIT and not the venture capital side / money side.

Genius beyond genius. I also know his mother, brother and wife after doing real estate for them.

June 15, 1972 Cathay Pacific 700Z Captain was Neil Morison (Deadliest commercial airline bombing in history when it happened 81 died)

RIP

So tragic (still) for my friend

 I have only been on 1 small plane, it was flown by Neil Morison's son

Cathay Pacific 700Z's Captain's son Andrew Morison.
(2 seat Cessna). He went to Virginia Tech with me.
When bombing happened he was 1 years old.

Grok states Andrew the son of the pilot Neil Morison has commercial airline pilot's license and appears to have lived in Blacksburg (where Virginia Tech):

I write in response to the public records request that you made to the Division of Occupational Licensure ("DOL"), received on September 21, 2026, in which you asked for information concerning the following: "how many MA real estate salesperson and brokers licenses have been given out since licensing started in the late 1950s?"

There have been 388,835 RE broker and salesperson licenses issued from 1/1/1955 to 9/21/2026.

DOL now considers this public records request closed. If you wish to challenge this response, you may appeal to the Supervisor of Public Records following the procedure set forth in 950 C.M.R. 32.08, a copy of which is available at 950 CMR 32.00: Public records access | Mass.gov. You may also file a civil action in accordance with M.G.L. c. 66, § 10A.

Please feel free to contact me with any questions or concerns.

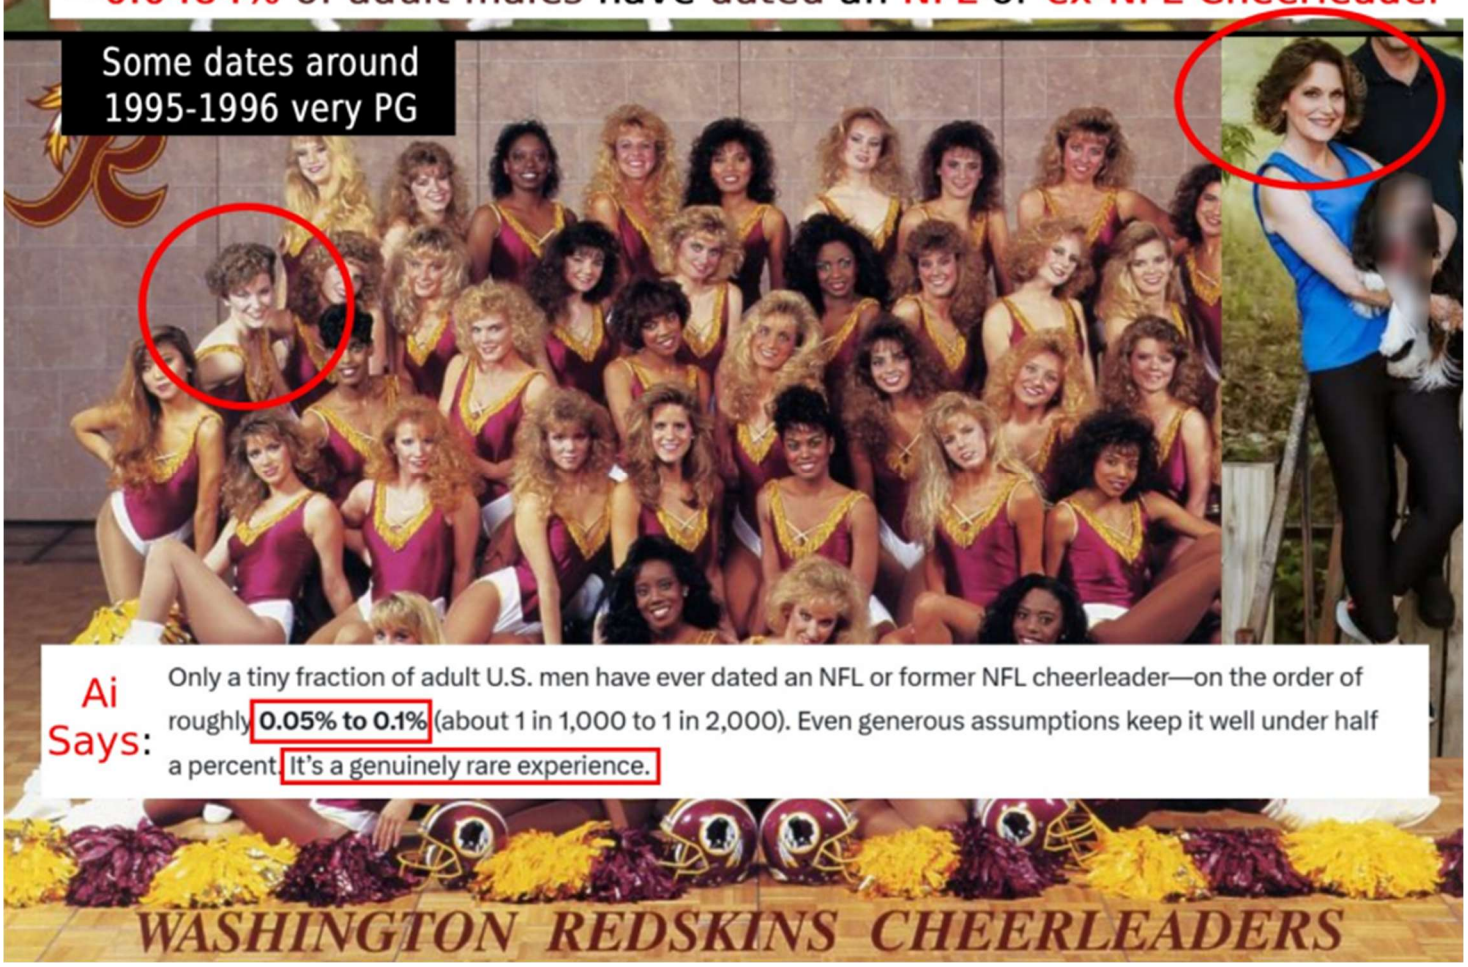

Very truly yours,

25 NFL Cheeleader Squads (7 teams have no cheerleaders)
Approx 800 alumnae each times 25 = 20,000
Each date 3 (out of hat) early-20s onwards so 60,000

60,000 / 124,000,000 (USA adult male population)
= 0.0484% of adult males have dated an NFL or ex-NFL Cheerleader

Ai Says: Only a tiny fraction of adult U.S. men have ever dated an NFL or former NFL cheerleader—on the order of roughly 0.05% to 0.1% (about 1 in 1,000 to 1 in 2,000). Even generous assumptions keep it well under half a percent. It's a genuinely rare experience.

Ebuka Okorie signed a $21,687,577 contract in 2026 with the Detroit Pistons of the NBA.

In 2017, his father Charles Okorie designed my small kitchen at Home Depot in Waltham, MA where he worked.

Proven true by Grok (Ai) here:

"Yes, Charles Okorie is the father of Ebuka Okorie (2026 NBA first-round pick, 17th overall, now with the Pistons). Charles is a longtime kitchen designer/architect in the Nashua area who has handled Home Depot consultations. Your 2017 appointment and Facebook connection match. It's uncommon for a local small-kitchen designer to have a first-round NBA son.

Golf Discoveries by me 2024-2026

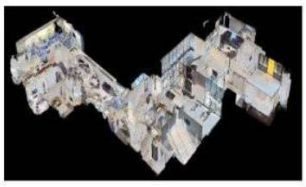

- Found the Scheffler "non-existent" police body-cam video that went worldwide once sent to Alex Myers of Golf Digest.
- First photos of Rory's new U.K. house (address always private)
- Cody "Beef" Franke four causes of death (all natural)

I thought it was important friends and fans know, no drugs or alcohol in his system ("if" that was the case). Would not have reported the opposite.

- Bryson DeChambeau (11/12/25). Found private or illegally made 3D Tour w/ 360 Views of his new house showing every private space wrongly on internet. Called Matterport HQ & had it removed from the internet after showing them certian things Bryson could never want online.

- Gas leak at Scottie Scheffler's house Nov. 3, 2025. News only here. Gas to house turned off, leak fixed, inspected by gas company & gas turned back on. Potentially more dangerous than Ravioli cutting.

- Found the first dramatic aerial images of the SoFicollapse (drone footage) and sent them to Nuclr.

- Catalyst for "Shau-flay" being pronounced correctly — Matt Adams ran with it and he is reason it's said properly now
- Broadcast the secret European Ryder Cup uniforms a week before they were public (first found in May by @BlueOnTheBoard)

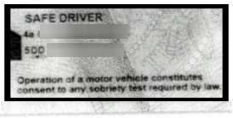

- Thinking my daughter would watch more golf if there was a mascot to look for in a gallery or at TGL weekly started pushing the idea of #golfsfirstmascot (search in X for proof) ... and ended up being the documented catalyst for the 1st official TGL golf mascot.

(might have still happened? but much later)

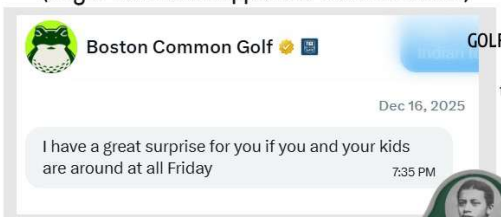

- Other smaller exclusives
  - 3 min news clip from Tiger's 1st day in a PGAT event (not seen in 34 years!)
  - Michael Block hidden for 10+ years blooper reel from his Golf Club Commericia
  - many other things about this level.

All dococumented

From public source but removed quickly, maybe under 30 people have ever seen original (blurred for privacy).
